A ROUND OF TALK.

The Strike.

Bill Simpkins was a worker, somewhere's near 'bount 6 o'clock,
Sittin' 'round the grocery fire, where he'd talk, and talk, and talk.
'Lowed that he could 'complish wonders 'ith th' cradle an' the plow,
An' said maybe if chance offered he would shorely show us how.
But when asked to give a reason fur his lazy, shiftless ways
O' jus' never doin' nothin' but a wastin' ov his days,
Bill would blink his eyes a minnit then would say as if surprised,
"I'm a waitin' boys, on congress, fr I must be subsidized.
"What's the use o' takin' chances?"
Bill would ask in anxious tones.
"What's th' use o' wastin' muscle or a rackin' ov yer bones?"
Then he'd settle back a grinnin' in th' ol' splint-bottomer chair,
One hand reachin' out fr crackers, tother mussin' up his hair.
An' next day he'd keep a loafin' an' th' rest of us would sweat
Fr th' clothes that we wuz wearin' an' th' little that we et.
"Taint no use o' workin' that way,"
William Simpkins he surmised;
"Send pertitions down t' congress an' we'll all get subsidized."
An' at last we got t' thinkin' that perhaps ol' Bill was right,
An' we made up a committee fr t' try an' furnish light
On this thing that Bill had mentioned, an' it was very long
Till we found him right, by hector, an' th' rest ov us wuz wrong.
An' we all just took t' loafin'; nary load o' grain we'd haul
'Cause we knowed it didn't pay us, an' we didn't work at all.
An' we are goin' to keep on loafin' till the country's paralyzed
Or our trusty old farm wagons, like th' ships, is subsidized.
—The Commoner.

BOND ISSUE—The proposition of a bond issue for the town of Springfield has been discussed to some extent and the matter has been brought before the City Council, but that body has yet taken no definite steps in the matter. At the last meeting of the Beard it was suggested that a mass meeting of the citizens of the town be called to consider the question but no definite steps were taken to that end and the matter was deferred to a later date. Before the town can assume a bonded indebtedness it becomes necessary to submit the question to a vote of the people. If two-thirds of those voting are in favor of the issue, the measure will be considered as carried. The proposition is to issue $10,000 of twenty year bonds, the money from the proceeds of the bonds to be used for the construction of streets and sewers for the town. The average taxpayer of a town is always more or less inclined to shy at a bond issue and the the taxpayers of Springfield will probably prove no exception to the rule. The burden of taxes for the taxpayers of the town is now about as great as the average citizen can stand and whereas the bond issue will not immediately increase taxes it will be assuming a debt for which the taxpayers are responsible. The reason that a bond issue nor any other measure cannot increase taxes is the very good one that the constitutional limit has already been reached, as regards municipal taxes The issuing of $10,000 bonds means the carrying of that amount of indebtedness by the town and the responsibility of the payment of the annual interest on the same which will have to come out of the city treasury. On the other hand it is claimed by those in favor of the bond issue that it is very necessary as the town grows to have more streets and sewers and other public improvements and without the money we can not have any of these. It is claimed that once the streets are put in first class condition that the cost of repairs and maintaining them will be greatly reduced The citizens will probably be given an opportunity to soon take the matter of a bond issue under careful consideration.

CONDEMNED—The members of the Washington County Local of the A. S. of E. did the proper thing the other day when they passed a resolution denouncing in strong terms the writers of those threatening anonymous letters said to have been sent to Mr. H. M. Moss, the buyer for the American Tobacco Co. The tobacco growers who are interested in this society cannot afford to countenance anything that marks of lawlessness. In every community there are a few irresponsible hot-heads and there are nearly always to be found some fellow who grasps the opportunity to write an anonymous letter. We understand that an investigation of the threatening letters has been put on foot and for the good of the community and for the good of the A. S. of E it is to be hoped that the guilty parties will be detected and punished.

QUEER CONDITION.—A queer state of affairs developed at a trial in Police Court last week in regard to the police officers on duty last county court day. The defendant was charged with the offence of interfering with the city marshal in the discharge of his duties and the case appeared to be a plain one, but for a technical defect which was discovered by the attorneys for the defense. Since the illness of Mr John Grace the regular city marshal, it has been necessary to appoint a substitute This substitute or rather several extra marshals were appointed to serve on the day in question. It developed however that there was some flaw in the proceedings by which the officers were appointed and that the town on that particular day had no marshall and the accused could not be held for interfering with the city marshal when that official did not legally exist. It was rather an unfortunate state of affairs and a dangerous one for the safety and good order of the town. However the technical difficulties have all been overcome and we now have a city marshal about whom there is no question as to his authority.

Wise Counsel From the South

"I want to give some valuable advice to these who suffer with lame back and kidney trouble," says J. R. Blankenship, of Beck, Tenn, "I have proved to an absolute certainty that Electric Bitters will positively cure this distressing condition. The first bottle gave me great relief and after taking a few more bottles, I was completely cured; so completely that it becomes a pleasure to recommend that great remedy Sold under guarantee at C. J. Haydon's drug store. Price 50c.

"Boot-Legger."

The first case of 'boot legging' to come up for trial in Harrodsburg since local option went in to effect last week was a case against a seventeen year old youth, who was arrested Monday afternoon by a police. The boy, whose name is withheld, is a son of a former saloon man. He was tried before Judge Grimes Tuesday afternoon and given the lowest fine of $60

The young man stated at the trial that he had taken one pint and four fifth pints of whisky from the saloon where his father was employed on the night that the saloons went out, and took them home and hid them in the coal house. Monday he brought the bottles up town and sold them to another boy, also a minor, for eighty cents.

The boy admitted that he knew that he had done wrong in selling the whiskey and also knew that it was against the law Judge Corn defended him and asked the leniency of the court, on account of the boys age, and said that if he was assessed a fine that it be suspended on his good behavior and promise not to sell any more whis ky. Judge Grimes said that he would be as lenient as the law would permit by letting him off with the lowest fine, but should he be found guilty of the second offense he would be given the extreme penalty, The boy was allowed four days in which to give bond for the amount of his fine

There is a probability of the Federal Court taking up the case and the grand jury may also indict the young man, in which event he will have a very hard row to hoe. The police and city officials are determined to enforce the law against all violaters of the local option laws, and so closely is the situation being watched that it is exceedingly dangerous for anyone to attempt the illegal sale of liquors here.—Harrodsburg Democrat.

Under the Wheels.

Mr. Chris Bell, a nephew of Prof. Chas. W. Bell, principal of the Harrodsburg Graded school was run over and instantly killed by a freight train at Bardstown Junction Friday evening at 6 o'clock. Mr. Bell was a brakeman on the Louisville & Nashville road between Louisville and Nashville and was attempting to make a coupling when the unfortunate accident occured. He stumbled and fell beneath the wheels, the train passing over his head and shoulders, horribly mutilating his body,

Mr. Bell was twenty two years of age and unmaried. He was a son of Mr and Mrs. J. H. Bell, who resides at Corbin. The remains were taken to Boston and buried Sunday. Young Bell attended the Graded School during the sessions of 1904 and 1905 and was quite well known and popular here. The news of his tragic death was received here with profound regret.—Harrodsburg Democrat.

Prompt Payment.

FEBRUARY FIRST

The Washington County Creamery Plant Will Begin Business.

The management of the new creamery recently completed here, has decided to begin business on the first of February. Mr. Arthur Goatley who is a Washington county man, but who has had several years experience in the creamery business in Kansas has been engaged to operate the creamery. Enough cows have been engaged to guarantee a sufficient supply of milk and it is expected that the supply will be increased later on as Spring opens.

It nas not yet been determined just how the milk will be collected from the farmers, but it is probable that a regular wagon will be furnished by the creamery and will make regular trips for the collection of the milk from the farmers who have subscribed the product of their cows.

Cincinnati Capital.

With the signatures of 65 per cent of the tobacco growers of Kentucky binding themselves to hold their tobacco until it can be marketed at a profit satisfactory to the farmers' pool, representatives of the organization are in Cincinnati to finance the project. One half are able to carry their own crops; the remainder are the week spots in the organization, as, unless they receive aid they will have to sell at whatever price the trust happens to offer. The banks of Cincinnati are friendly to the project It will take about $2,000,000.

Clarence Lebus, with several others of the executive committee of the Kentucky Tobacco Growers' Pool, conferred with representatives of the Cincinnati Tobacco Warehouse Company at the Emery Hotel wednesday night.

The Cincinnati tobacco warehouse people are willing to undertake the task of financing the crops of weak growers, but will insist on having it placed absolutely in their hands.—Lexington Observer.

Important Opinion.

The Court of Appeals recently dismissed the appeal in the smallpox case of the city of Bardstown against Nelson county, and on motion of the City of Bardstown awarded damages against the county on the judgment. By a later decision the Court withdrew the opinion and overruled the plaintiff's motion awarding damages against the county. The opinion is an important one as it involves the question of damages upon costs which was principally in issue in this case. Counsel for plaintiff, R. C. Cheery and George S. and John A Fulton; for the county, Nat W. Hasead and F. E. Daugherty.—Bardstown Standard.

Shipment of Jacks.

Tuesday afternoon Mr. John B. Vancleave, of Missouri, shipped from this city 10 head of jacks, claimed, by good judges of this kind of stock, to be the best ever seen in this community. In height these jacks ranged from 14½ to 16 hands. One of them a two year old, was bought of Mr. Ben J. Lancaster, of this city, for $800. The remaining eight were purchased of men in adjoining counties at a price ranging from $700 to $1,000 per head. These animals were taken to Smithton, Missouri, to top a large and extensively advertised sale of jacks and jennets, which will take place there in a few weeks.—Lebanon Enterprise.

Resolutions.

Whereas, It has pleased the Great Teacher to call from her studies here to the school on high, our school-mate and companion, Dorothy McElroy.

Be it resolved: That in her death, our school has lost one of its brightest pupils; our society, one of its most faithful members; and we, a much loved friend.

That, we are deeply sensible of our loss and mourn her death.

That, while we grieve that we shall clasp no more her loving hand nor hear again her gentle voice, we humbly submit to our affliction and pray for strength to say sincerely: "Thy will, not ours, be done."

In her life, she taught us how to live nobly, purely and unselfishly; in her death, how to die, sustained by an unfaltering faith that lets us fear no evil, tho' we pass thro' the valley of shadows, and which promises life eternal where hearts linked in love know no partings and tears no more can fall.

That we extend our sympathy to her family in their grief and to her friends in their bereavement.

That these resolutions be spread upon our records, published in the local papers and a copy sent to her family.

IDA MCCLURE, Pres.

THURSDAY, JAN. 17, 1906

Our neighbor Lebanon is on the verge of a local option campaign. The temperance people have a petition in for a call for an election on the liquor selling question for March 25th. The vote is to be taken in the city of Lebanon only as that is a fourth class city. Lebanon is the only point in Marion county where liquor can be legally sold anyway so if it is voted out there the entire county will be dry. In case the temperance people are victorious the saloons will be closed before those in Springfield are for the reason that the Lebanon saloon licenses all expire in May while several in Springfield run until late in the summer. The outcome of the fight will be watched with interest.

They dont treat Gov. Beckhams opponitees very well at Jackson. One William Carnes appointed by the Governor to sit in the Hargis case was called down by the Court of Appeals for questionable rulings and there has been presented to Gov. Beckham a petition signed by a number of well known citizens of Jackson requesting him to call upon Special Judge William Carnes, the Governor's appointee for the case of James Hargis to resign his commission at once, and not again sit upon the bench at Jackson.

A queer state of affairs exist at Evansville, Ind. The river has cut a channel across the Big Horseshoe bend between Evansville and Henderson and is flowing through at a tremendous rate, leaving the water in the harbor as quiet as a lake. The city confronts the serious danger of being left five miles from the Ohio.

MAUD.

When it comes to writing up news one usually wants some rare occurrence, something new indeed, to make it the more interesting and this time for once I have it surely but I shall not keep you in suspense any longer for suspense is something to be dreaded. almost as much so as expense, but than if you will only follow the exapple of an honor able old citizen who lived in this community, (he is dead now and died a rich man) you will never be at any great expense. His coat was becoming very much worn and on being questioned why he did not purchase himself a new one replied: "Oh, if I can wear it today I can wear it tomorrow." You know there are a great many, and young people especially who think they are compelled to have numerous things when if they act upon the judgment of the old fellow mentioned see that if they can do without today they can do with out tomorrow, and upon deeper meditation see that it would have been a vain silly act merely to satisfy vanity and that their meager income would have suffered by it thereby causing others to suffer, but then I did not mean lecture and, to use a slang expression (if you will pardon it) I have "sidetracked" my subject with which I jokingly began. I merely meant to say that we have had so much rain that the river has not been fordable, were it not for the bridge, but very few days within the past two months and if the rain continues I think some of our roads will be "past fording" too.

The tobacco growers here have taken advantage of the excellent stripping season and all are very nearly through. All but a very few crops have been pooled.

THE SMART SET.

All the World

is a stage, and Ballards Snow Liniment plays a most prominent part, has no superior for rheumatism, stiff joints, cuts, sprains, and all pains. Buy it, try it and you will always use it. Anybody who has used Ballard's Snow Liniment is a living proof of what it does' Buy a trial bottle. 25c 50c and $1,00. Sold by the Red Cross Drug Store

Borax Starch.

One of the simplest forms of starching in a case of sudden need is the use of borax water. A quarter of a teaspoonful of borax in half a teacupful of cold water will give a dressing like new to embroidered cuffs and collars, or even those made of linen. Dip the article you wish to starch in the dissolved borax, wring and roll in a dry cloth for a few moments, then iron.

Superfluous Hair.

Get an ordinary five cent cake of pumice stone—not pumice soap, but the regular old fashioned pumice stone. To remove the hair, rub the skin affected with the superfluous growth and the pumice stone will wear the hair off. Be careful not to rub too hard, which irritates the skin. In case the skin is made red by the treatment use a little cold cream.

Good Way to Give Castor Oil.

Put a tablespoonful of orange juice into a small tumbler, pour in the required amount of oil and more orange juice on top. The oil forms a ball in the middle of the juice and is swallowed without coming in contact with the tongue.

Baked Milk.

Milk put into a stone jar, tied down and put into an oven and baked for several hours is very nourishing for invalids and delicate children, and tastes almost equal to cream.

St. Alban and His Teacher.

By some strange irony St. Alban, the martyred but possibly mythical Roman soldier, whose festival falls on June 22, has yet nonetheless as his probably historic instructor, St. Amphibalus, whose anniversary comes on the following day. About Amphibalus we know that he was a native of Caerleon, which the golden legend expresses by dubbing him "a prince's son of Wales in grete araye." He was inducted by Bellarmine, but "translated" to St. Alban's abbey, where his cup was preserved, "which they of the common sort call St. Affabelle Bolle." In former times children were frequently christened with his name, and Affabell Partridge was goldsmith to Queen Elizabeth.—Westminster Gazette.

Dunkirk's Fete of Lanterns.

One of the quaintest of the numerous yearly fetes still in honor at Dunkirk is the fete of lanterns, instituted many hundreds of years ago in honor of St. Martin, bishop of Tours, who died in 396, and who was one of the prelates by whose efforts the early inhabitants of these parts were converted to Christianity. As soon as dusk sets in the celebration commences, and all the urchins of the town congregate in the main thoroughfares. Each one bears a paper lantern, some of which are of considerable proportions, being shaped in the form of a ship or a flower. With lanterns in hand and blowing lustily on horns and trumpets, the crowd of youngsters parades the streets.—London News.

Faith Cure Elephants.

The temple elephant in southern India is the object of great respect, for physical contact with him is supposed to do more good to the human body than the best medicine. Adult men and women warily feel his legs with help finger tips and press them reverently to their eyes, and ailing children are for a small consideration carried in his back the distance of a few strides that they may be cured.—Madras Mail.

Be Understood.

"Walk right in, dear. Your supper's ready, your slippers are right where you can find them easily, and your pipe and tobacco are on the writing desk, handy for you."

"All right, Molly," groaned the tired, suspicious husband. "You can get that new dress tomorrow."

Knowledge.

Properly there is no other knowledge but that which, is got by working. The rest is all yet a hypothesis of knowledge, to be verified or not in schools, a thing floating in the clouds. A endless logic vortices, till we try to fix it.—Carlyle.

Another Awful Outrage.

"Harry," said his wife, "this is awful! Look at this morning's paper! It says you are a scoundrel. It says in plain print that you made your fortune by corrupting other men. Look here! You are accused of bribing and chasing agents to buy your goods when they were inferior to others offered at the same price. This is terrible! You must make them retract at once. Editors can be sent to jail for criminal libel, can't they? If it isn't criminal libel to print stuff about a respectable business man that shows him to be no better than a common thief and blackleg, I don't know what it is. Here—look at this! It says you allowed the county commissioners large sums of money for giving you contracts to furnish public institutions with supplies at exorbitant prices. Oh, dear, is nobody's reputation safe? You must, in justice to society, take immediate steps to have these scandal mongers, these detestable muck rakers, punished. You owe it to yourself and to your family and to the public to make"—

"Yes, yes, my dear, I know it. It's an outrage—a damnable outrage! I shall take immediate steps in the matter. I'll go at once to my lawyer and instruct him to—to find out, if possible, how much evidence they have."—Chicago Tribune.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys get out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling all about Swamp-Root, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Home of Swamp-Root.

FOR THE CHILDREN

The Enchanted Handkerchief.

This handkerchief is just the thing for young magicians to possess.

It has the power to make things disappear. You use it to cover some borrowed article—a coin, say, or a card—pull the handkerchief quickly away, and, lo! the borrowed article has completely disappeared.

The handkerchief is prepared as follows:

Get two pretty good sized men's handkerchiefs, both exactly alike. In the middle of one of these cut a slit about four inches long, which get your sister to hem round the edges to prevent its becoming larger.

Now ask her to lay one handkerchief upon the other and sew together the edges. If the work is done neatly the whole will appear to be nothing more than a single handkerchief, especially as, when you draw it from your pocket, you shake it out, with the unprepared side toward those who are watching you.

Next, taking the card in the left hand, you cover it with the handkerchief, at the same time slipping it into the pocket-like arrangement between the two.

So, you see, when you ask some one in the audience to "hold the card covered by the handkerchief, please," and then jerk the whole from his hand, the effect will be that the card has disappeared.

Bee Bread.

Do you know that the bees get bread as well as honey from the flowers?

Watch closely some time and you will see the whole performance. You must keep your eyes very wide open, though, or it will be over before you know it.

First, Miss Bee sucks up the precious drop of honey which the flower has stored away for her. She always knows just where to find it, too, though each blossom has its own particular kind of pantry. Then she gathers her flour. This is generally packed in tiny boxes, with slits in the side, and Miss Bee has only to put in her fuzzy little feet and scrape out the precious flour.

We call it pollen, but the name does not matter. To Miss Bee it is flour, and she packs it away carefully in the wee baskets on her hind legs, first moistening it with a drop of honey. When she has as much as she can carry she flies back to the hive and stores away her load for future use. The bread made from this flour requires neither raising nor baking.

The pollen grains are crushed, soaked and kneaded with honey, and the bread is ready for the baby bees, who are the only ones that eat it.

Game of Pass Along.

This is a first rate outdoor game. Arrange two lines of boy and girl players, each headed by a captain.

At the right of each captain place a clothes basket or hamper full of all sorts of odds and ends—books, balls, clothespins, pencils, tin cups, tin pans, cushions, spools, brushes, thimbles, button hooks, etc. At the other end of each line place an empty clothes basket or hamper.

Behind each line place a guard.

At a signal from the hostess the two lines get furiously busy. Each captain snatches anything at all from his full basket, passes it to the player standing next to him, and that one passes it along to the next, etc. The end player throws it into his empty basket.

Meanwhile the guard watches closely, and if any player, through carelessness or carelessness, drops the article that has been handed him to pass along the guard pounces down upon it and takes it back to the full basket to be passed over again.

The side which first transfers everything from its full basket to its empty basket wins. The more "rooters" there are to encourage the rival sides the jollier the contest.

Millions For Defense.

It is always a pity to destroy a pretty phrase, particularly when so laudable a sentiment as patriotism is involved. You have all heard "Millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute!" for the phrase has been famous for a century. It is attributed to Charles Cotesworth Pinckney, who represented the United States in France in 1796, and who had made a treaty with England that threatened to involve us in a war with France, and the directory then governing France refused to receive Mr. Pinckney, intimating that the payment of a certain sum might settle the dispute.

Then it was, according to a popular story, that Mr. Pinckney said: "Millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute!" It is said, however, that when he was asked about it afterward he answered, "My answer was not a dignified like that, but simply, 'Not a penny, not a penny!'"

Riddles.

What mostly resembles a cat's tail? A kitten's tail.

When is a baby not a baby? When it's a little bare.

Why is an egg like a colt? Because it isn't fit for use till it's broken.

What pain do we make light of? Window pane.

When is it a good thing to lose your temper? When it's a bad one.

It's Worth

traveling a long distance to have your teeth extracted

Without Pain or Danger

go record-breaking.

Natural Supposition.

"Ah, yes," said Senator Smugg as he interlaced his claws in a self satisfied way in front of his corposity, "I got my start in life by clerking in a humble grocery store at a salary of $3 a week and managed to save money on that."

"But," replied the astute reporter, "that, of course, was before the cash registers were invented."—Puck.

Absolute Worthlessness.

The Clam Peddler—What kind of a feller is't that your niece married, Mrs. Tubman?

The Widow—Tell you what's a solemn fact, Mr. Shelly—in confidence, of course. He's so utterly no account that I don't believe she could raffle him off at a church fair!—Watson's Magazine.

How to Make a Pincushion.

Take an oval piece of cardboard 6 by 2 inches and put cotton batting on both sides. Then cover with blue satin and put narrow lace around the edge. Put blue bows of baby ribbon on the ends and have the loops of the ribbon coming together in a point. Tie in a bow there to keep them together. Take white beaded pins and put in three rows and on the other side work your initials in white silkateen. Then take a hook and paint white to hang it up by.

My Uncle's Black Pig.

My uncle's black pig is an interesting game that can be played while sitting. One is out or it, and the others sit in a row. The one who is out goes to each one in turn and asks a question, and the answer to each one in turn must be "my uncle's black pig. If one should answer out of turn he is out. If any one sitting in the row talks or laughs he is out. The one whose turn it is to say "My uncle's black pig" must not laugh or say anything else.

Salt and Charcoal For Hogs.

Hogs should be allowed free access to a mixture of charcoal and salt, more especially so from the time they are started on green corn and right through the feeding period until they are marketed. This is a matter that is recommended so much that its great importance is sometimes not believed in by farmers. This mixture seems to satisfy a craving that is incidental to a corn ration. Above all don't be afraid to give the hogs a little salt.

The Scrub Stallion.

Too many scrub horses are raised. The long talked of colt crop that was to flood the market fails to materialize. For several seasons past this colt crop has been threatened, but the prognosticators are unable to make good. If all the horses now seeking market were what buyers required, the crop would be worth far more money. The evil agent is the scrub stallion, and he ought to be retired.

Care of Fall Litters.

An old saying that properly applies to the growing of live stock is, "Well begun is half done." So it is important that fall litters be well nourished from the beginning. As long as the weather remains fine allow the saw a run on pasture with her young. This will keep the pigs in good condition and there will be no danger from thumps, which sometimes gives trouble when they are kept in confinement.

Let Sheep Eat Plenty.

A sheep will consume more for its weight than a cow, and it should. It has to raise a crop of wool, a crop of lambs and provide for itself at the same time. Don't compel it to feed a lot of ticks also. If you raise enough of fodder corn this year, it will be better for your sheep than grain and cost much less.

Ration and Cow.

The dairy ration should be palatable. It should be nutritious. It should be digestible, abundant and as inexpensive as possible after the other essentials are secured. But we should never lose sight of the fact that no ration is ever good enough or cheap enough to coax a profit out of a worthless cow.

Sort the Hogs Into Sizes.

Is that poor economy in hog feeding that was practiced last year and the year before being repeated again this season—that is, to feed hogs of different sizes together? It is much better to sort them into two sizes at least. The reason for this is obvious.

Sheep on the Farm.

A woods lot near the home or a small well fenced pasture in sight of the house is the ideal place for a bunch of farm sheep. Here they stay until allowed to forage upon some patch or stray stack. Here they will give rich returns.

Water the Fowls.

Always have plenty of good water for the poultry. Fowls suffer more for the want of water than feed, but can go a long time without either and live.

House Cleaning Notes.

If either your cellar or pantry is damp put pieces of unslacked lime about. It will absorb the moisture and keep the place sweet. When cleaning house, rub the bed slats generously with alcohol. It will keep vermin away.

Pastor Called.

At a congregational meeting at the Presbyterian church held on last Sunday it was decided to extend a call to Rev. R. E. C. Lawson, of Henderson. A resolution was also passed fixing the salary of the pastor at $1200 a year. The deacons were instructed to canvas the congregation and ascertain the amount which will be subscribed for the coming year to the church support and if the ammount obtained is as much as $1500 the moderator is instructed to prepare the necessary call to be submitted to the Presbytery. We understand that there has been no difficulty in raising the required amount and the call will formally extended. Mr. Lawson will be kindly remembered by the people of Springfield. He served as pastor of the Presbyterian church here for several years and three years ago left to accept charge of a church at Henderson, Ky., where he has made himself quite popular. It is not known of course if Mr. Lawson will accept the call, but the members of the church as well as the people of the town generally will be glad to welcome him back should he decide to return.

Another Meeting.

Another meeting of the Washington County A. S. of E. was held at the court house last Saturday afternoon It was the last day for those who wished to enter the pool with their tobacco and quite a number of crops were added to the list. It was said that there is about 2,000 acres of an of an estimated 3,000 acres of the crop of the county pooled

Mr. W. C. McChord made a speech in which he congratulated the members on the success of the effort to form the pool and organize. Mr. McChord also offered a resolution condemning in strong terms the action of unknown parties in sending threateaing letters to Mr. H. M. Moss, buyer for the American Tobacco Co. Mr McChord urged the members of the society to use every endeavor to discourage any feeling of antagonism against the American Tobacco Co, and its agents—that the society wishes to win the fight in a business like way and that resorting to violent methods would ruin the interest of the society.

Messrs. W. C. McChord, W. M. Nally and W. A. Clements are in Winchester this week attending the meeting of the district committee of the Burley Tobacco Society. News from there yesterday indicated a successful meeting and the reports from the various counties indicate that 70 percent of the crop has been pledged to the Society. Plans are being perfected as to the manner of receiving and grading the crop and of advancing the money.

Outrageous Threats.

Mr. H. M. Moss who has been buying tobacco in this county for the past four years for the American Tobacco Co., his employer has been made the subject of several cowardly and outrageous threats through anonymous letters Mr. Moss has received three or four of these missives during the past two weeks and they come from various points. One bore the postmark of Harrodsburg and was written on a type rite, another was mailed on the rural route of Willisburg, and a third was dropped into the postoffice at Springfield. The letters contain threats and personal abuse against Mr. Moss and warning him to stop buying tobacco in the county. It is beleived that the letters eminate from some irresponsible scoundrels who probably never grew a crop of tobacco in their lives. The members of the A. S. of E. who have the success of the movement at heart realize that such methods are a menace to the success of the movement to form a pool and are anxious to detect the perpetrators of the outrage. It is a dangerous piece of business this using the U. S. mail for such purposes and a term in the penitentiary is awaiting the miscreant if caught. Mr Moss has by his gentlemanly conduct and strict attention to business made many friends in the county who feel outraged over the cowardly attacks which are being made on him.

Marriages.

(COMMUNICATED)

It is quite rare to see two children in the same family marry the same day, and consequently no wonder there was such a great crowd to witness the marriage feast on last Wednesday, Jan. 9, at Fredericktown.

At 10 o'clock sharp at the Catholic priesthouse, Miss Mary Lucy Mudd spoke out the momentous "yes" which was to bind her until death to Walter Reynolds, her chosen one. Miss Mudd is a daughter of Felix Mudd and a very bright young lady of 20 summers, while Mr. Reynolds is a son of John Reynols and is esteemed by all who know him The ceremony was performed by the pastor of the Burg church.

Soon after they were taken to the church, there to be witnesses to the marriage of Louis Mudd and Miss Charity Willett. Although not 21 years old, Louis is looked upon as a very industrious young man and one of the most clever young gentlemen of the vicinity. He is a son of Felix Mudd. His pretty and accomplished bride enjoying the same youngage is a daugh er of of J. W. Willett. Immediately after giving each other their sacred promises Father Peters ascended the alter and sang the Nuptual High Mass. A great crowd, all admirers of the happy couple, had thronged into the Lord's house and were very much impressed by the imposing ceremonies and the beautiful voices of the choir members After the pastor had expressed to both his heartiest wishes for a happy married life, the couple happily marcheo to the outside where they could not find time to answer all the good words heaped upon them. It was truly a beautiful scene.

Mr. Mudd and his wife will occupy the four room residance on the land of his father and Mr. Reynolds will try his luck in the mansion lately vacated by Jim Thompson. We now extend to all our sincerest wishes for a long and prosperous career.

TELESCOPES.

The Difference Between Reflecting and Refracting Kinds.

A very pretty little experiment which illustrates the two methods of forming an optical image and by way of corollary illustrates the essential difference between refracting and reflecting telescopes may be performed by any one who possesses a reading glass and a magnifying hand mirror. In a room that is not too brightly illuminated pin a sheet of white paper on the wall opposite to a window that by preference should face the north or away from the position of the sun. Taking first the reading glass, hold it between the window and the wall parallel to the sheet of paper and a foot or more distant from the latter. By moving it to and fro a little you will be able to find a distance corresponding to the focal length of the lens, at which a picture of the window is formed on the paper. This picture, or image, will be upside down because the rays of light cross at the focus. By moving the glass a little closer to the wall you will cause the picture of the window to become indistinct, while a beautiful image of the houses, trees or other objects of the outdoor world beyond will be formed upon the paper. We thus learn that the distance of the image from the lens varies with the distance of the object whose image is formed. In precisely a similar manner an image is formed at the focus of the object glass of a refracting telescope.

Take next your magnifying or concave mirror, and, detaching the sheet of paper from the wall, hold it nearly in front of the mirror between the latter and the window. When you have adjusted the distance to the focal length of the mirror, you will see an image of the window projected on the paper. By varying the distance as before you will be able to produce at will pictures of nearer or more remote objects. It is in this way that images are formed at the focus of the mirror of a reflecting telescope.

Three Lessons.

The value of a thickly populated community of a well organized military body under capable and resourceful leaders, the wisdom and expediency of some system for providing a reserve water supply and the resistance of carefully built "anchored" steel structures to earthquake shocks of average violence, are three lessons impressed upon the public mind by the San Francisco disaster.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Disagree.

The Equity Society of dark tobacco growers of Daviess county have for some months been at a disagreement over the pooling of the 1906 crop. One faction has been in favor of letting the Louisville Warehouse Company finance the business as was done last year, and a larger faction was in favor of pooling and financing at Owensboro. It was feared that a split would be the result, but at a meeting this week, both factions united and elected Henry Berry, President, which, it is now thought, will harmonize all factions on some policy by which the crop will be stored successfully pooled and a better price be realized. —Farmers Home Journal.

Preserving Objects of Interest.

Americans are slowly awaking to the commercial value of preserving natural wonders and objects of historical interest. An important factor in the prosperity of Italy and other nations of the old world is the tourist trade. It has been estimated that the money spent by tourists in Italy constitutes a third income of that country. Entry of the United States into the galaxy of world powers has greatly increased its value from the standpoint of the tourists, and steamship companies report a marked increase in the last few years in the number of foreign visitors to this country. Hitherto Americans have not been quick to realize the necessity of preserving and marking the points of interest in the various parts of the country which will attract visitors.—Boston Transcript.

Shakespeare and Servian Politics.

A striking scene was witnessed, our correspondent says, at the performance of "King Richard III." at Belgrade. In the ghost scene a whisper ran round the house that the presentment of Hastings resembled the late General Petrovit, who was murdered together with King Alexander. And in the monologue of the affrighted Richard the words, "I am a villain," were hailed with such frantic applause that the actor was unable to proceed. The whole audience from pit to gallery was in a state of indescribable emotion, and it was rumored that the piece will not be allowed to be given again.—St. James' Gazette.

Daring Deed of English Girl Attacked by Two Texas Convicts.

SOUGHT EX-GOVERNOR'S LIFE

Escaped Prisoners, Bent on Assassination, Found Governess in Family of Their Intended Victim Too Much For Them.

One of the merriest deeds ever performed by a woman was the killing of two escaped convicts by Miss Lucy M. Willard, an English governess in the family of an ex-governor of Texas. This is her own story of the incident;

"I had been some four months with the family, which consisted of the ex-governor, his wife, mother and daughter, when the southern part of Texas was thrown into a furore of excitement over an extensive jail delivery at the state penitentiary. Twenty convicts managed to make good their escape, among them several murderers undergoing life sentences, horse thieves and other desperadoes.

"The ringleader of the outbreak was Bill Kelly, known throughout Texas as 'Big Bill.' Now, it happened that Kelly had on several occasions while my employer was occupying the office of governor written letters to him begging for clemency and promising to turn over a new leaf if he were liberated. To these the governor paid no attention.

"Several days after the men broke jail a letter was delivered to the ex-governor. It was from Kelly and bore the collection mark of a postoffice some sixty miles distant.

"'You refused me the chance of reforming,' it read. 'You laughed at me in prison. Now I'll give you a run for your money.'

"One Sunday morning about three weeks after the escape of the convicts my employer drove with his wife out to his farm. Most of the servants had gone with those of the neighbors into town to church, leaving me with the little girl and two negro servants, man and wife, to look after the house.

"I was just stepping through the window into the veranda to join Elsie, my charge, when I heard a shot fired somewhere behind the house.

"'Lock de do'h, Miss Willard, quick! Robbers!' shouted Sam, the negro.

"Another shot followed, then a scream. I grasped the little girl by the arm, pulled her into the house and slammed the window shut. Another shot rang out, and then Sam ran from behind the house loading his rifle. He shouted something to me which I could not make out, and in my terror I ran to the next door with Elsie and, locking the door of the library behind me, shrank into the farthest corner. This room was on the left of the house, and from its window I could see two men one standing, the other kneeling—beside the fence nearest the barn.

"CRACK! WENT SAM'S GUN."

"One of the men was very tall and thin. He was without a hat, wore a blue blouse, and his trousers were tucked into his boots. The other, who knelt, was the most hideous looking creature I have ever seen—red haired with a long scar across his face, over his nose, almost from ear to ear. His rifle lay on the top rail of the fence as though aiming while the taller man was reloading. Suddenly crack! went Sam's gun again, and simultaneously the kneeling man fired. Then he got up and laughed. He had hit our noble defender! Suddenly there was a loud ringing downstairs, which so unnerved me that I fell into a chair.

"'The telephone, Miss Willard,' said little Elsie, who until now had remained remarkably cool.

"'Heavens, what a fool I have been! That was what Sam had been trying to tell me to do—to telephone for assistance! What was I to do? I could not leave the child alone, although she seemed braver than I, and our only salvation lay in the telephone. Now there was tramping on the veranda, and with a crash a window was knocked in.

"'What's that noise?' said a voice. 'Burglar alarm, eh! Well, you can ring as long as you like; there ain't no one here.'

"Evidently they thought the place deserted and that we had all gone.

"'Why, it's the telephone!' said voice No. 2, with a laugh. 'Let's see who it is.'

"'Better not, old pal; they'll get tired o' ringin' and quit.'

"Such proved to be the case. The ringing ceased, and we could hear the men walking about down below.

"They came to the stairway, and just as the first of the men started to ascend Elsie screamed out in terror, 'Papa, papa!'

"'Eh, what's that?' cried one of the strangers. 'Why, there's some one here. Look out, Bill!'

"There was a hurried movement, then a shot was fired up at the ceiling.

"I FIRED BOTH PISTOLS."

Turning suddenly, my eye caught sight of a brace of cavalry pistols hanging in their holsters over the roll top desk. I took them down, almost as much afraid of the things as I was of the men below, but they seemed to give me courage. I did not even know if they were loaded, but I no longer felt my first terrible fear. As she was crouched under the desk. I stood in front of it and was beginning to hope that perhaps the men would not come up, after all, when I heard the stairs creak and knew some one was ascending. The library was the second door on the left of the staircase, and I heard stealthy footsteps approaching from the top of the stairs. A moment's stillness, then the knob of my door turned, but I had bolted it. Elsie moaned aloud in her terror, and the man outside heard her.

"'Women folks, eh? Well, the main guy ain't here, so I'll talk to you. Open the door.'

"Then there was a mighty heave, but the door did not give. I involuntarily raised the pistol in my right hand, which shook very much, and pointed it toward the door. Another heave, and still it did not give. Then there was a muttered curse, and, with a crash, the door flew open, and the tall man almost fell in.

"I pulled the trigger of the pistol. Once, twice thrice, each time it spoke, and the man fell almost against my extended arm, so close was he when I fired. I was dizzy with fear and grasped the desk for support, but the ordeal was not over. Two steps at a time came the other ruffian rushing up, and just as his figure appeared in the frame of the doorway I fired both pistols point blank at him. He fell against the wall on the other side of the hall, then rebounded and fell on his face across the open doorway. I turned to look for the child, but my limbs would not support me, and, although I did not faint, I sank to the floor. Poor Elsie! She had fainted.

"I crawled to her and tried to drag her from under the desk, but somehow I had absolutely no strength. Of a sudden I heard shouting and the galloping of horses. Then came quick orders, and in another minute the house was full of men.

"The two bandits were 'Big Bill' Kelly and one of his confederates, named Mulligan. They had escaped a posse, which was close at their heels, and had evidently come to wreak their vengeance on the governor or his family. The poor black, Sam, was killed—shot through the head. His wife, who had first seen the men, was also wounded, but not fatally. When the escaped convicts had given their pursuers the slip, the leader of the posse, Dan Taylor, a noted man hunter, had telephoned to our house, or tried to, from Lamly, a station some distance away, and it was his call on the telephone which I had heard, but could not answer.

"Two of my shots had struck the first man, both taking effect in the body. Only one had hit the second, but it struck him in the forehead. As the pistols were 45 caliber and the range was so close both men were instantly killed."

Possibly.

"Why is it," she whispered at the close of the ceremony, "that the bridegroom always looks as if he couldn't call his soul his own?"

"Probably," replied her brother, "it's because from that moment he really isn't."—Catholic Standard and Times.

FOR THE LITTLE ONES.

The Game of Orchestra Is a Jolly Evening Pastime.

A jolly stunt for an evening in the house is a family brchestra.

Choose one person to serve as conductor. Let everybody else sit around her in a circle, each one having agreed to imitate a certain instrument which he has chosen for his own—one a flute, another a violin, another a drum, etc.

The conductor raps with his baton (a cane or umbrella), and as he raises it for the start let every performer give out the first note of his imitation instrument.

Perhaps a measure or two of some familiar selection, like "Lohengrin," can be given in this way altogether. Then the conductor can call on this one and that one to give a solo part and impose a fine upon him if he giggles or breaks down.

This is great fun for a party.

Marvels of Sight.

The greyhound runs by sight only. The carrier pigeon flies its hundreds of miles homeward by eyesight, noting from point to point objects that it has marked, or so at least it is thought. The dragon fly, with 12,000 lenses in its eye, darts from angle to angle with the rapidity of a flashing sword and as rapidly darts back, not turning in the air, but with a clash reversing the action of its four wings and instantaneously calculating the distance of the objects, or it would dash itself to pieces. No one can tell in what conformation of the eye this power consists. A thousand mosquitoes dance up and down in the sun with the minutest interval between them, yet no one knocks another headlong on the grass or breaks a leg or a wing, long and delicate as they are.

A Peanut Party.

To give a peanut party is not a difficult thing. First invitations should be sent. The invitations may be written on small paper. A peanut should be taken from the shell and the invitation rolled and put within. A baby ribbon may be tied to the peanut and the other end fastened to a card with the name of the guest on it.

When the guests come the first game would be a peanut hunt.

The evening should be spent in amusements with peanuts. Peanut contests could be given, such as how many peanuts could be grasped in one hand and who could shell ten peanuts the fastest without breaking the peanuts.

Twirl the Plate.

The players seat themselves in a circle, and each takes the name of some town or flower or whatever has been previously agreed upon. One of the party stands in the middle of the circle with a plate, places it upon its edge and spins it, calling out as he does so the name which one of the players has taken. The person named must jump up and seize the plate before it ceases spinning, but if he is not very quick it will fall to the ground, and he must then pay a forfeit. It is then his turn to twirl the plate.

Conundrums.

What is the difference between a man with black hair and one with a bald head? One is crow shade (crocheted), the other is nit (knit).

When is a sailor not a sailor? When he's a-board.

When is a soldier encamped like a studious child? When he's intent.

Diseases of Hogs.

Scaly diseases of hogs are produced by excessive heat in the summer and cold in the winter, says American Agriculturist. These are greatly benefited by providing sheds during the hot weather and comfortable quarters when it is cold. If the pig is fat give it from one to two ounces of sulphate of magnesia dissolved in one-half pint of water. Then give it one-half dram of acetate of potash three times a day. The diet during this time should be of a cooling nature.

Poultry Notes.

Cleanliness is next to godliness in poultry culture as much as in anything else. Clean quarters keep down the lice, prevent sickness and add to the good returns.

Lice soon weaken the strongest fowls, check egg production and make the business unprofitable.

Good sharp grit prevents indigestion. A neglected case of indigestion will lead to liver trouble, then the fowls go light and die.

Not So Good.

"A young man's chances for making a great fortune are not so good as they were a generation ago."

"Not quite," answered Mr. Dustin Stax. "That's the fault of the people who have insisted on exposing the tricks of high finance."—Washington Star.

Forced to Marry Sick Girl, Horseman Tries to Desert Her After the Wedding.

BROTHERS AVENGE SISTER.

Attempting to Jump From Chamber Window, Recreant Virginian Is Shot Down and Falls Dead In His Wife's Sight.

W. F. Bywaters, a well known horse man, with a specialty for high jumpers, a follower of the foxhounds and popular society man, was killed at Culpeper, Va., by two sons of the late Colonel John R. Strother almost immediately after he had married their sister.

The story leading up to the tragedy was told by French Strother, a third brother of the girl.

"I came to Culpeper Friday," he said, "because we had reason to believe something had happened to my sister and the name of my family. I told my sister what we suspected, and I told her that if it was true I would kill the man on sight.

"Bywaters came out to the house, and I told him what I suspected and that I had about proved my suspicions correct. He protested innocence, and I told him I did not believe him and that I would kill him.

"Then he asked to be permitted to see my sister, who was in bed suffering from the results of an operation that had been performed in Washington. I finally let him go to her room, and they both confessed. Then he asked to be permitted to marry her. I told him I did not want him to marry her, but he pleaded, promising to marry her and take good care of her.

"I finally consented to the marriage and told him that if he ever deserted her or mistreated her I would kill him. My sister also pleaded that she be permitted to marry him. I knew that with my sister in the condition she was if I killed him then and there I might also kill her, so I left the place."

After French Strother left home Bywaters and James and Philip Strother, two brothers of the girl, went to Culpeper and got a marriage license. Rev. J. W. Ware of the Episcopal church performed the ceremony.

After the marriage Bywaters said that, having married the girl, he thought he had done his duty and then announced his intention to leave her. Relatives of the girl remonstrated with him, and he rushed to a window leading from the bedroom to the roof of the porch. At this instant both brothers of the girl drew revolvers and fired repeatedly. The man fell back dead, his body falling near the girl's bed.

HE FELL BACK DEAD NEAR THE GIRL'S BED.

The two men who did the shooting were arrested.

Bywaters was well known among fox hunting people throughout the state. His pack of hounds was perhaps the best known in the country, for the Grafton pack and Harry W. Smith, which defeated the Middlesex pack in the American-English hound match in Piedmont valley about a year ago, was largely drafted from those dogs. Bywaters also owned a number of crack cross country horses, among them Jubilee, which he sold to Court land H. Smith and which is now owned by David B. Tennant of Leesburg.

Mice Burn $1,365.

At Nordmont, Pa., in the mill of the Nordmont Chemical company Monroe Phillips laid his coat on a shelf. It is presumed that then a mouse ignited matches in the pocket, and the coat burned up, together with $65 in cash and $1,300 worth of negotiable notes.

THE BLUEBEARD STORY.

It Has a Mythical Rather Than a Mythological Origin.

The fascinating story of Bluebeard has a mythical rather than a mythological origin. No one has found his prototype in the Vedas or in the old Greek or Roman authors. The story is supposed to be of French origin, and it has even been suggested that Bluebeard was no other than the much married Henry VIII. There is, however, better reason for believing that the original was Giles de Laval, lord of Rinz, who was marshal of France early in the fifteenth century. He was a brave soldier whose exploits in the wars between England and France are recorded in history. According to Milgeay, he murdered his wives as soon as he tired of them, and was himself eventually strangled in 1440.

The story of Laval has, however, not many points of resemblance, for there is no mention of a key, and Giles de Laval, moreover, used to entice persons of both sexes to his castle for the sake of their blood, which he wanted for certain incantations he indulged in. Nor, indeed, does the story fit in with our own Henry VIII., and we are left to believe that, whatever the origin, the key and Sister Ann were added for the sake of effect. A variant of the story of Giles de Laval is told by Hollinshed, in whose version the name is Giles de Retz, Marquis de Laval, who lived in Brittany, and was strangled and burned for the murder of his seven wives. Dr. C. Taylor, it may be added, regarded the story simply as fiction, a satire on one type of the castle lords of the days of knight errantry.—London Globe.

OAK AND PINE.

The Value and Usefulness of These Classes of Woods.

Though generally accepted that oak is the proud capable of being put to the greatest variety of uses, it is known, as a matter of fact, that the pine is really the most used, on account of its great abundance. Nevertheless, the timber of the oak combines in itself the essential elements of strength and durability, hardness and elasticity in a degree which no other tree can boast, unrivaled as a material of shipbuilding, also superior in architecture, cabinetmaking, carving, mill work, cooperage and innumerable other purposes, while the bark is of great value as furnishing tan and yielding a bitter extract in common demand for medicinal purposes.

But of trees for the pine details would be well nigh endless. The timber is invaluable in houses and ship carpentry; common turpentine is extracted from it in quantities and immense supplies of tar, pitch, resin and lampblack. In the manufacture of matches, and, above all, paper pulp, thousands and tens of thousands of acres of pine forests are cut down every year, and, briefly, the timber of this tree, constituting as it does the chief material of the North American builders, may be said to be more used than all other kinds of wood put together.

Another Awful Outrage.

"Harry," said his wife, "this is awful! Look at this morning's paper! It says you are a scoundrel. It says in plain print that you made your fortune by corrupting other men. Look here! You are accused of bribing purchasing agents to buy your goods when they were inferior to others offered at the same price. This is terrible! You must make them retract at once. Editors can be sent to jail for criminal libel, can't they? If it isn't criminal libel to print stuff about a respectable business man that shows him to be no better than a common thief and blackleg, I don't know what it is. Here—look at that! It says you allowed the county commissioners large sums of money for giving you contracts to furnish public institutions with supplies at exorbitant prices. Oh, dear, is nobody's reputation safe? You must, in justice to society, take immediate steps to have these scandal mongers, these detestable news rakers, punished. You owe it to yourself and to your family and to the public to make"—

"Yes, yes, my dear, I know it. It's an outrage—a damnable outrage! I shall take immediate steps in the matter. I'll go at once to my lawyer and instruct him to—to find out, if possible, how much evidence they have."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Natural Supposition.

"Ah, yes," said Senator Snugg as he interviewed the slave in a self satisfied way in front of his corposity, "I got my start in life by clerking in a humble grocery store at a salary of $3 a week and managed to save money on that."

"But," replied the astute reporter, "that, of course, was before the cash registers were invented."—Puck.

Absolute Worthlessness.

The Clam Peddler—What kind of a feller is it that your niece married, Mrs. Tubman?

The Widow—Tell you what's a solemn fact, Mr. Shelly—in confidence, of course. He's so utterly no account that I don't believe she could raffle him off at a church fair!—Watson's Magazine.

In and Out of a Fix.

A good game is known as "Getting into a fix and out of it."

Give the players ten minutes or so to think of some sort of predicament or "fix." Then call time and let each write a story involving some one in the fix that he has thought.

Gather up all the stories and then distribute them so that no one will receive his own paper back. Now tell each player to think up and write on a separate piece of paper a way to get out of the fix that he finds described. Then each one must pass his paper to his left hand neighbor and, taking the paper handed him by his right hand neighbor, must devise a way out of the fix he finds described on that paper, and so on until all the papers have passed through each player's hands.

Then, gathering up the "fixes" once again, you may read each one in turn aloud and ask each player to read from his papers the way he suggests for getting out of the fix.

One fix, for instance, was thus described:

"Going out of my house one day I caught my dress in the front door, which was equipped with a spring lock. There was no one whom I could call to ring the bell for me, nor could I reach the bell myself. What was I to do?"

One answer, "Bang on the door and call."

Another answer, "Cut off the piece of your dress that was caught."

Another: "Unfasten your skirt and slip out of it. Then ring for admission."
